In addition to the ceremonies on the occasion of the turning over of the Centennial records on Thanks-giving day already announced on the printed programme, we learn that one of our most scholarly citizens, not known as a poet and not even as-piring to be so known, has written a most graphic and full description of most graphic and full description of Frankfort as she appeared on Centennial day. The description is in the most beautiful poetic verse, and will be read at the Opera House next Thursday. Every thing connected with the Centennial seems to have such a charm about it that although this turning over of the records is intended as a little home affair, we doubt whether the Opera House will hold all who desire to be there. The house will be lit up at 12 o'clock and and those who expect choice seals and those who expect choice seats had better be there before 3 o'clock.

The favorite Kentucky river packet, the tidy steamer Blue Wing, having had a thoroug, ho verhauling and righting up at Madison, has resumed her regular trips, leaving Louisville Tuesdays and Fridays at 3. p. m., returning leaving Frankfort Wednesdays and Saturdays, arriving at 7 o'clock. She will be at the city wharf this evening, the 20th, bright as a new dollar, ready for passengers and freight bound down the Kentuck, with Capt. Geo. W. Anderson in command. The Blue Wing cuisine is famous for its elegance and substantial square qualities; for reference see Capt. James Shaw on the hurrican roof and Capt. Benjamin Freeman at the wheel. The merchants of Frankfort and the business men in the county should bear in mind that it is their duty to sustain the competition. Steamboats and steamboatmen can't live on air and water alone.

ROUNDABOUT -Supplement

FRANKFORT, KY., NOVEMBER 20, 1886

End of the Centennial Furning the Centen-nial Records Over to the City.

THANKSGIVING DAY, Nov. 25, 1886

AT 8 O'CLOCK.

It was in the original plan of the Centennial to turn over all of the records to the city of Frankfort publicly on Centennial day, but this feature having been omitted on the printed programme for the 6th of October, these records still remain in the possession of Col. John L. Scott, who has selected 3 o'clock on Thanksgiving day, Thursduy, Nov. 25th, 1886, to discharge his trust and turn all these valuable records over to the city at the Opera House. Thanksgiving day has been selected because on that day our people will be free from all business cares and in a projfrom all business cares and in a prop-er mood for just such exercises as these.

All are cordially invited to be at the Opera House precisely at 3 o'clock and enjoy the execution of the following:

PROGRAMME 1. Col. John L. Scott's short address turning over the records

2. A song, John Anderson—By Miss Nellie Orbison. A response-By Hon. E. H. Tay-

8. A response—By Hon. E. H. Taylor, Jr., Mayor.
4. A song—By Miss Belle Sanders.
5. Col. Ford's City of the Dead—By Miss Nannie Browder.
6. A song—By Miss Nellie Orbison.
7. The Drift-pile, a quaint production—By the Author.
8. A song—By Miss Belle Sanders.
9. Impromptu short speeches by Governor Knott, Judge Sneed, John C. Herndon and several others, in which suggestions will be made as to the best way to preserve these records and make them useful. cords and make them useful.

The exercises will close with a familiar chorus by Prof. Wayland Graham and all the vocal musical talent of Frankfort, in which the audience will join in old love feast style.

A Timely Rescue From a Most Fearful Death.

The Wilimington (Del.) Morning News, of Sept 8th, 1886, gives the following history of a prominent business man's plucky fight and ter-rible experience with that much dreaded and always-to-be feared dis-ease Cancer.

business man's plucky ignt and terrible experience with that muchdreaded and always-to-be feared discase, Cancer.

Some five years ago a barber accidentally cut my lower lip while shaving me. The pain was very slight and for some time I hardly gave it a passing thought. Finally it assumed the condition of a wart, which refused to heal entirely with all my efforts in that direction. I went to one of the leading physicians in Philadelphia, who treated me three months for cancer and sent me home cured, as he said. But I was apprehensive. I was told by a prominent physician of Wilmington that'I would surely die of cancer. About this time I heard of the wonderful cures effected by Swiff's Specific, known as S. S. S.

A fail trial this all disappeared,
and I felt like myself again.

I continued to take the Swift's Specific medicine regularly for several months, and before I could realize how it came about I was a new man again In fact I was curred—never felt better in my life, and from that time up to the present I have never felt the least evidence of a return of my old trouble. The cancer disappeared over a year ago, but I refrained from making the cure public before this, as I wished to be certain that I was cured. My condition is perfectly normal-I have now of those annoying symptoms which followed every other treatment used. I honestly believe that I have been cured of one of the worst afflictions that can be visited upon the human family, and by the medicine known as S. S. S. Ido not wish my name to appear in this connection, for business reasons only, but you are at liberty to give my name and address to any fellowing to any one interested in the cause of humanity.

The Value of Clean Linen.

Fox himself was not so particular as regarded his personal appearance as were many of his Quaker followers. He was careful to be always neat and that his linen was spotless, and there, so far she was concerned, the matter ended. Once, shortly after the commencement of his self-imposed mission, his fondness for clean linen did him good service. Being arrested at Partington, ostensibly as a vagrant, but in reality because he was suspected of being a Royalist spy, he shook out all the linen in the bundle he carried to satisfy the magistrate that he had no letters or papers. Convinced as to this, the justice ordered him to be set at liberty, remarking that no vagrant would have such clean linen.—London Society.

A TALE OF THE NOW.

An American Story by an American Author Using American Ingredients.
The glorified and inflamed west was just decepning into rosy twilight, and the eastern bills were in the act of peeling off their ruddy robes for the night, when a well dressed Englishman of American descent might have been seen wending his way in a northeasterly direction, regardless of the gathering night. He was tall, lithe and pimply in the extreme, with a large, wistful, dewy eye. The other eye was also in the same condition. His name was Edmund Clayborne Briggs, adonesticated Englishman from Massachusetts. He was a self-made man; but, aside from that, he had never done anything reprehensible.
Edmund Clayborne Briggs' ancestors had that, he had nover done anything reprehensible.

Edmund Clayborne Briggs' ancestors had doiled for a livelihood, for they were an ignorant people and did not know any better. He was engaged in trying to overcome this inherited desire for Industry—this strange, morely department of the success thus far had been phenomenal. Still he hoped to accomplish even greater things in that direction.

His dress was that of a young man born on American soil, but who had tried to conceal the digostiking and terrible fact from the eye of the world. His pantaloons were worn flowing in the legs and glossy across the seat. All that he had done thus far in life had been in the scientary line. He was proud of the fact that his hands were not hardened by low, coaves tgil. Some that claimed that there was located, but that wanly an different was located, but that wanly an different wall this is no place for anything of that kind.

were bantons on his brain where self-esteem was located, but that was only an idlerumor, and this is no place for anything of that kind.

How sorry he felt for those who wore American shoes and New York hatal As he stood leaning against a fence, feeling a strange, yearning for something more definite, be looked down at his own English made shoes, with their fat and "pussy" app arance, their droop in the middle and the fr wide, overfed, choked look. He felt of his youngest pimple and looked at the stars, which were just coming out one by one.

We will leave him there a few moments while we pass on to briefly describe a young thing named Vaselinia Colffure, who stands in the bay window patiently waiting for us to do so. She is not neglecting her other work. She feels that she was born to be loved, and though she she has no there work. She feels that she was born to be loved, and though she has been out of a job a good deal of the time, that is her business. To love and be loved is her aim in life. She loves Edmund with all the deep, ripsim. Her father was a tolker, and now, at the start of the she was been to the she will be she she will be she she will be she she will be she s on the joints of her elbows, so that she will not scratch the marble top dressing case whis she leans on it in order to ponder a fee hours over the interrogatory, "Why was 1 born?"

The night has almost instantaneously grown intensely dark. It is as dark as the interior of a benighted Ethiopian. The wind is sighing through the trees, and seeking out the belated gentleman whose underwear has been worked up into a reg carpet.

"And will be never, never come?" murur Vaselinia as she sits on one of her feet on the lounge and hums a low refrain, entitled "Clinbing up the Golden Stair."

The bell now reverberates and Edmund enters. They looked into each other's eyes, but all is vacancy there. It is what they expected.

Anon Edmund seats himself. It is his normal condition. In his hand he botles came with a white celluloit head to it. How he envies the came. Thoughtfully he leans forward with the whole white top of the stick immersed in his mouth. He is just about to peak when there is a sharry, resonant explosion, a dull cry of alarm from Vaselinia, the smell of gun cotton, camphoe, hair oil, damaged ideas and escaping gas.

A P: sickan is Galled.

The servants rush in. They flee away terror. A physician is called. He finds the celluloid head of Edmund's cane h spontaneously combusted while in his mou and carried with it Edmund's entire into and carried with it Edmund's entire intelectual done. The physician looks all over the room, and even peers under the sofa for parties of the young aman's think retort, but h is not successful. At last he is forced to tell Vascilnia that Edmund cannot recover.

Two years have now passed, and Vascilnia's mother has removed from the chippet, with the all of gasoline, every vestige of Edmund's immost thoughts, but Vascilnia is still unwed.

We should learn from this that we cannot make a more judicious present to a galvanized, young Englishman than a celluloid top cane, for he may try to cut his teeth on it, in which case he might make a spatter-work dado on the wall with what he has tried to paim off on the public for brains.—Bill Mys in Beston Globe.
